The NHBPA will continue our path forward to advocate for reform that is fair, accountable, and rooted in science. The Racehorse Health and Safety Act (RHSA) offers exactly that. By returning oversight to state racing commissions and recognized industry experts, RHSA ensures collaboration, transparency, and constitutional integrity, while maintaining the highest standards for equine health and safety.

We as horsemen have never opposed reform. In fact, we demand it. But reform must be measured by its impact on both horse welfare and the safe completion rate of races—not by headlines highlighting rare tragedies. This is how we protect our industry and ensure horsemen can continue making a living while maintaining the highest safety standards.

As we are looking ahead, despite challenges, I remain optimistic. Our sport is vibrant, with historic meets, strong wagering, and passionate fans. The NHBPA will continue to work with policymakers, regulators, and industry stakeholders to safeguard Thoroughbred racing's future. That means fighting for fairness, advancing science-based reforms, and ensuring that horsemen and women who are the backbone of this industry have a voice in every decision that impacts their livelihoods.

Together, we will focus on what truly matters: horses that run safely, races that uphold integrity, and a future where horsemen thrive alongside the horses they care for.

Sincerely,
Eric Hamelback
CEO, National HBPA
